

Unable to work out how the board has any relevance to the store, you head up the stairs with Mezza. You could have taken the elevator, but Mezza doesn't particularly like tight spaces, you've come to realise.

On the floor above you spy a number of shoppers loitering about, occasionally stopping to examine the plethora of items on display. You walk over to a cashier and enquire about what they have for sale. They mention the names of various sprays, but a silver-bottled one catches your attention, which you promptly proceed to purchase.

You continue exploring the other floors of the building, but do not find anything else of note to buy. You had expected the shopping process to be more thrilling, but it unfortunately wasn't thanks to the flashing strobe effect playing on the third floor TVs. You're not sure why the store had such a visual on display or what could have caused it, but you swear that at the end of the clip you saw something move off-screen begrudgingly, as though it had been blamed for something it never caused.

In any case, you decide to take a pit stop on the roof to ease your newly earned headache. You sit down at a picnic table, and try to take your mind off the pain by focusing on the strange poster plastered on the tabletop....

popstar-like outlaw
 label-like smiling
 signal-like; wield
 loo-like; rising
 flipper-like buff
 cow-like love
 devil-like English
 prestige-like armour
 fish-like stupid
 cool-like spin

joist-like starve
 joke-like end
 vehicle-like bloom
 pound-like Pokémon
 lace-like showy
 each-like gruesome
 spot-like weed
 curse-like luxurious
 crumb-like sappy
 maggot-like Pokémon

kiss-like church
 wheat-like hungry
 maize-like die
 bridge-like discipline Vegetable-like vegetable singe-like European economist-like language
 average-like disappear
 uneven-like beige