Author: Kevin Liang

It takes some effort to break free from the hypnotic clock's ticking, but when you do, you discover you're back in the clearing.

Lamar slaps the metal wall next to him. "Damn dream mechanics!" Ahead, Shannon jumps with fright and turns around.

"That was fast," she says after recovering. "Did you find anything?"

"Fast? How long were we gone?" asks Penny.

Shannon automatically goes to check her watch before remembering how impossible it is to keep track of time here. "Well, it felt like a minute or two."

"Never mind," you say. "We hopefully fixed some of the problems in the machine. Have you had any luck here?"

"Yep," says Harrison without looking up from the Somnus. "But there's something here you should look at, Death."

You step over. Harrison lifts up the Somnus and flips over the hovering disc platform beneath. On its underside, four strange grids glow amidst an array of circuitry...
